

ADVANCED ANALYTICS Increased Insight Into Your Source-to-Pay Data

Today's businesses generate overwhelming amounts of data, leaving a ton of untapped value waiting to be found. While existing processes can identify top-level leaks – key gaps in expertise, technology and personnel prohibit organizations going beyond what can be found in traditional source-to-pay audits. In turn, organizations are missing out on hidden revenue potentials.

In most cases, complex system architectures, siloed departments with inconsistent data visibility, and manual processes through legacy systems prevent uncovering these unseen opportunities. As a result, you are left with vast amounts of data rather than insight.

Even when organizations do take action on their data, the time, labor, expertise and technology investment required to organize and analyze this data often outweighs the potential benefits. And even if you procure sufficient resources for this project, the complexities and needs would grow larger tomorrow. What's needed is a solution that can accelerate time-to-value and increase the business value without taxing your current team and budget.

Drive Better Results

As a leader in recovery audit, we use our technology-enabled approach to quickly and securely ingest high volumes of disparate, complex data within a single system. Layering in artificial intelligence and machine learning, our proprietary big data infrastructure and spend classification technology efficiently manages large and complex data sets, reducing the bandwidth and time commitment from partners.

Visibility of this data then allows our unique team of data scientists, auditors and contract management experts to work together to quickly uncover anomalies – including purchase price variance, categorization and vendor normalization issues – while identifying revenue-generating opportunities hidden deep inside your data.
